Thousands of dollars in gold are thus put into active circulation, as the money rapidly passed through the hands of shopkeepers and others. In a number of instances persons who received the gold were puzzled to distinguish between the three dollar and five dollar gold pieces. Several persons, when gold was paid to them over the bank counter, pushed it back and said they would rather have greenbacks. A number of shopkeepers tin Washington refuse to receive trade dollars for more than eighty cents.

TENNESSEE IN CONGRESS.

Our State has abundant cause to be proud of its representation in congress. BLAINE A HUMBUG.

Blaine seems to be impressed with the belief that notoriety is fame, and his ambition is gratified if he succeeds in advertising himself. The impression is now general that he is a fraud and an arrant humbug. His performances are not equal to his promises. When he proposes to make a speech his preparations are equal to those of Napoleon before he commenced his march to Moscow. Before making his last speech in the senate, he had himself advertised throughout the country; distributed his speech among the newspapers in advance. With such a swelling prologue the country expected much. But the mountain brought forth a mouse. It burt nobody but James G. Blame, whom it kicked over and killed. Blaine, since the introduction of his resolutions and the delivery of his sectional and inflammatory speech, is regarded as out of the race for the Presidency. His fate is another illustration of the great truth that ambition often overleaps itself and falls on the other side. The art of holding one's tongue has often been highly recommended to the world; but, after all, there are a very few men who have wisdom to practice it. In most conditions of life, it is one of the important essentials to success. No man will ever become a SHAW, DAVIS & CO. leader of men who does not carry it into his daily intercourse and business. The mischief that may be caused by the total lack of it is well illustrated by such noisy blatherskites as Blaine. A judicious man would have seen at a glance that it was scarcely possible for at a general agency business. Come to see uz. Our Mr. Juo. M. Shaw is not dead, as reported.

MEMPHIS APPEAL him to say anything that would justify him in reviving sectional hatreds. Had James G. Blaine allowed this session of the senate to pass over without opening his mouth, public curiosity would have followed him. But he made a speech-blunder number one; he made a foolish, unnecessary, incendiary speech-blunder number two. His rant and appeals to sectional katreds satisfied the country that he is a turbulent demagogue, without patriotism, and reminded everybody of the worst side of a dangerous man. An aspirant for the Presidency may survive the attacks of his foes; will do so if there is anything in him. But, when he claps an extin guisher on himself, his tate is irrevocably tion, diffeen cents per line per week.

The utter farce of Blaine's committee was fully shown when that committee first met on Friday last to commence the investigation. The scenes of that meeting vestigation. The scenes of that meeting have been graphically described by several correspondents of the New York and Philadelphia papers. They met in one of the senate committee-rooms, and immediately made the attempt to proceed to business. But they were immediately taken aback by finding that they had nothing to commence upon-not a single definite allegation as to fraud in the south. Here was a poser. When, however, it was suggested that the President might have some facts, and that he be called upon for them, the Republican members of the committee, who had probably been instructed beforehand, immediately We see it stated that Mr. James Redpath | voted down that proposition.
